New York, December 1, 2020 – Prince Street Gallery's December online show will feature five of their gallery artists, each following their own path toward abstraction or realism.

Grant Drumheller is a figurative painter, working in large and small formats. In addition to Prince Street Gallery, his work is shown at Greenhut Gallery, Portland, ME and The Elder Gallery of Contemporary Art, Charlotte, NC. Drumheller has received numerous awards and fellowships for his work, most recently enjoying an artist in residence at The American Academy in Rome. Drumheller is exhibiting gouache / watercolors created since the onset of the Covid-19 pandemic. www.grantdrumheller.com

Arthur Kvarnstrom's early work was based on direct observation. This has not changed. What has changed is his intent. During the student years, his objective was to accurately draw or paint what he saw. During the past several years, his intent has evolved to focus on marks, abstract shapes and rhythms. Stewart Siskind draws from his early career as an art director in New York. It is here that he mastered the use of printed matter as a central element in the composition and design of collage. In his recent work done during quarantine, the artist uses strong color, torn edges and shadow play. Siskind transforms recycled material into bold graphic structures that resonate with subtle psychological undercurrents. www.stewartsiskind.com

Margaret Tsirantonakis in her recent color driven paintings continues her focus on the garden theme. Using shallow space, vivid color, and layering of gestural brushstrokes she achieves a rhythmic fluidity in these paintings. Born in Crete, Greece, Tsirantonakis came to US as a one year old. She lives and works in Stamford, CT. Her work is in private collections in the US, Europe and Japan. www.mtsiran-art.com

Michael Walden is a figurative artist based in Coastal New England and New York City. In 2014 Walden was awarded a MFA from Massachusetts College of Art. In 2017 Walden made his debut in New York City with a solo show at the Leslie Lohman Museum. In recent years, he has been awarded artist residencies at The Fine Arts Work Center, Vermont Studio Center, and the Cuttyhunk Island Artist residency.
