Larry Groff: *Auguries

recent oil paintings; from mind, memory and the microscopic

May 21 – June 15, 2019

Groff's recent paintings depict the gestural flow of evocatively sculpted forms moving through atmospheric spaces. The genesis of these colorful and richly textured forms are partially inspired from microscope photos of grains of sand; taking inspiration from the line in the William Blake poem, Auguries of Innocence, "looking at the world through a grain of sand".

Inspired by poetry as well as science, merging abstraction with realism, Groff celebrates the dialectical nature of travel through both the visible and invisible worlds. His prior experience with years of observation-based landscape painting lends solidity and authenticity to these new imagination-based works.

Larry Groff is a San Diego, Ca. painter who before 2007 lived in Boston, Ma. He has exhibited in a number of venues in California, New York, Vermont and Massachusetts. Groff attended the Massachusetts College of Art, Yale University Summer School of Art and Music and Boston University where he received his M.F.A. in painting.

For the past 11 years Groff has been the founder and editor of the "Painting Perceptions" website. The website features his interviews with many established contemporary representational painters around the world as well as many emerging artists nationally. "Painting Perceptions" also showcases videos, reviews, opinion essays and more by contributing writers.
