Prince Street Gallery presents Julie Bowers Murphy's first solo show in Manhattan, from March 26 - April 20, 2024. "Sinners and Saints" serves as a visual pairing of those who sin, and those who are forgiven.

The artist writes:

As an artist I feel compelled to tell a satirical story of modern times: where lying is normalized, art is held hostage, the greedy get greedier, hatred and division is at its worst: all factors combined forcing many to dig deeper into their vices as coping mechanisms. It poses the question: Will we be forgiven for our sins?

Murphy has exhibited her work at The Edward Hopper House and Museum, in group shows at The Provincetown Art Association and Museum, as well as Prince Street Gallery and Bowery Gallery in New York. She is represented by The Willard Gallery in Portland, Maine, Watson Kennedy in Seattle, Washington and The Captain's Daughters in Provincetown, Massachusetts.
